Glazba i glazbenici u migraciji:
promišljanja prošlosti i suvremena razmatranja

Ova izložba, postavljena u sklopu Međunarodnog muzikološkog skupa Music Migrations in the Early Modern Age: People, Markets, Patterns, Styles (Glazbene migracije u rano moderno doba: ljudi, tržišta, modeli i stilovi), želi pružiti prikaz izvora s jedne strane (autografi nota, tekstovi o glazbi, pisma, molbe) te različitim načina njihove interpretacije s druge strane (suvremena notna i tekstu-alna izdanja, studije i članci, nosači zvuka). Njihove poveznice su glazbene migracije vezane uz hrvatske zemlje u 17. i 18. stoljeću. Pritom se migracije promatraju u najširem smislu, bilo da se radi o privremenom boravku, ili trajnom preseljenju u novu sredinu. Domaći glazbenici putovali su u inozemstvo donoseći kući znanje koje se onda i ovdje primjenjivalo, strani glazbenici su donosili znanje i iskustva iz svojih kulturnih krugova te ga implementirali u novo okružje, a domaći glazbenici koji su boravili u inozemstvu nadograđivali su obrazovanje na svoje iskustvo iz domovine. Nisu migrirali samo glazbenici, već su donošeni i glazbeni artefakti te implementirani modeli muziciranja i glazbeni stilovi. Međusobno prožimanje različitih znanja, iskustava, ukusa i ideja obogatilo je i transformiralo lokalnu sredinu, utjecalo na svjetovne i crkvene kru-gove, plemiće, a donekle i na „običan“ puk. Izabrali smo stoga neke karakteristične primjere (Tomaso Cecchini, Ivan Belostenec, Juraj Križanić, Gjuro Baglivi, Petar Nakić, Amando Ivančić, Giuseppe Michele Stratico, Luka Sorkočević, Jan Křtitel Vaňhal, Julije Bajamonti, Ivan Jarnović) na kojima se na najzanimljiviji način ogleda značenje glazbenih migracija. Proučavanjem njihova djelovanja istraživači dolaze do novih spoznaja što rezultira novim interpretacijama. One nude dopunjene, ispravljene ili čak promijenjene poglede na dosadašnje spoznaje. Sve to pokazuje do koje su mjere migracije obilježile hrvatsku kulturnu, napose glazbenu povijest. Naposlijetku, omogućuju da se ona bolje sagleda u širem, europskom kontekstu kao njezin rubni, ali važan dio.

Introduction

This exhibition, mounted during the International Musicological Symposium Music Migrations in the Early Modern Age: People, Markets, Patterns, Styles, intends to offer a presentation of sources (music autographs, texts on music, letters, requests), as well as diverse ways of their interpretation (modern printed music and textual editions, studies and articles, sound recordings). The link between them is music migrations that took place in Croatian lands in the period of 17th–18th centuries. The migrations are thereby studied in the broadest possible sense – regardless of whether they meant temporary stay or permanent migration into a new environment. Musicians from Croatia travelled abroad, and returned home with new knowledge where it was then implemented; foreign musicians brought knowledge and experience from their cultural circles, and implemented them into the new environment; while musicians from Croatia who stayed abroad based their further education upon the experience from their homeland. It was not only musicians who migrated; musical artefacts were transferred, while models of playing music and music styles were implemented as well. The intertwining of diverse knowledge, experiences, tastes and ideas has transformed and enriched the local community, influencing secular and ecclesiastic circles, nobility and to a certain extent the common people too. Therefore we have chosen several characteristic examples (Tomaso Cecchini, Ivan Belostenec, Juraj Križanić, Gjuro Baglivi, Petar Nakić, Amando Ivanschitz, Giuseppe Michele Stratico, Luka Sorkočević, Jan Křtitel Vaňhal, Julije Bajamonti, Ivan Jarnović/Giovanni Giornovichi) that in the most interesting manner reflect the importance of music migrations. By studying them, scholars acquire new knowledge, which subsequently results in developing new interpretations. They offer amended, corrected, or even altered views of the knowledge acquired so far. All of it shows the extent to which these migrations have marked Croatian cultural, and in particular music history. Moreover, they can thereby be better comprehended within a wider, European context albeit as the marginal and yet important part thereof.

Portret grofice Julijane Erdödy Drašković naslikao je Michael Millitz u Beču 1778. (Preslika. Izvornik: Hrvatski povjesni muzej, sign. HMP-PMH-8765.)

Grofica Julijana Erdödy, rođena Drašković (oko 1747-1784) bila je glazbeno obrazovana, svirala je klavir i pjevala. Njezin drugi suprug, Ladislav III. Erdödy (1746-1786), bio je najvažniji mecena umjetnosti, posebice glazbe, u Banskoj Hrvatskoj u drugoj polovici 18. stoljeća. Na njegovim posjedima u Varaždinu i Novome Marofu tijekom 1770-ih kao dvorski glazbenik povremeno je djelovao Jan Křtitel Vaňhal.

Countess Julianna Erdödy, née Drašković (c. 1747-1784) was musically well educated. She played the piano and was a singer. Her second husband Ladislaus III Erdödy (1746-1786) was the most prominent patron of the arts, especially of music, in the Ban's Croatia of the time. During 1770s, Jan Křtitel Vaňhal occasionally served as a court musician on Erdödy's estates in Varaždin and Novi Marof.

Ova rukopisna knjižica iz 1779. sastavljena je za groficu Julijanu Erdödy Drašković, čija je obitelj imala posjede u Varaždinu i okolicu. Sadrži 20 klavirskih skladbi, čiji su autori uglavnom Franz Joseph Haydn, Jan Křtitel Vaňhal i Ignaz Joseph Pleyel, te pet popijevaka za glas i klavir. Taj oveći udžbenik (164 str.) za sviranje i pjevanje bio je namijenjen glazbenoj razonodi dame iz visokog društva, koja je bila i vješta pijanistica. Djela iz knjižice mogla su se izvoditi na čembalu, klavikordu i klaviru, a sve je te instrumente obitelji Drašković i posjedovala.

This manuscript music-book was compiled in 1779 for the Countess Julianna Erdödy Drašković, whose family owned estates in Varaždin and its surroundings. It contains 20 compositions for piano, mostly by Franz Joseph Haydn, Jan Křtitel Vaňhal and Ignaz Joseph Pleyel, as well as five songs for voice and piano accompaniment. It presents a fine example of a Sammelband of piano and vocal music literature (in total 164 pages), used by a skillful piano player and a noble lady for her leisure time. Compositions in this music-book were meant to be played on harpsichord, clavichord and piano. Drašković family possessed all these instruments.

Glazba u Varaždinu u 18. stoljeću /
Music in Varaždin in the 18th century

Češki skladatelj, violinist, orguljaš i glazbeni pedagog Jan Křtitel Vaňhal (Johann Baptist Vanhall, Wanhal, Wanhall; Nechanice, Češka, 1739 – Beč, 1813) djelovao je od 1752. kao orguljaš u Opočnom, a kasnije regens chorii u Nemyčevesu. U Beč se preselio 1761. Između 1769. do 1771. boravio je u Italiji (Venecija, Bologna, Firenza, Rim), gdje se pobliže upoznao s djelima Christopha Willibalda Glucka i Floriana Leopolda Gassmanna. Tijekom 1770-ih povremeno je boravio u Varaždinu i Novome Marofu na posjedima Ladislava III Erdödyja, gdje je skladao, koncertirao i podučavao. Od 1780. ponovno je djelovao u Beču. Među njegovim najistaknutijim učenicima bio je skladatelj Ignaz Pleyel. Vaňhal je skladao oko 100 simfonija, jednako toliko komornih skladbi, dvjestotinjak sonata i sonatina, šezdesetak solističkih koncerata, tridesetak divertimenta, gotovo 50 misa te brojne plesove.

The Czech composer, violinist, organist and music teacher Jan Křtitel Vaňhal (Johann Baptist Vanhall, Wanhal, Wanhall; Nechanice, Bohemia, 1739 – Vienna, 1813) became at the age of 13 organist in Opočno. Later he became choir director in Nemyčeves in the province of Jičín. In 1761 he moved to Vienna. Reaching Italy in May 1769, he spent about a year in Venice, travelling later also to Bologna, Florence, Rome etc., where he got acquainted with the music of many prominent composers, including Christoph Willibald Gluck and Florian Leopold Gassmann. During 1770s he occasionally served as a court musician on Count Ladislaus III Erdödy's estates in Varaždin and Novi Marof, where he composed, gave concerts and taught music. In 1780 he returned to Vienna. Among his most prominent students was the composer Ignace Pleyel. Vaňhal composed about 100 symphonies, some 100 chamber works, 200 sonatas and sonatinas, c. 60 concertos, 30 divertimentos, almost 50 masses and numerous dances.

Commentary: C28 is unique because it is an autograph and because Wanhal designated it "Symphonia" even though it has only one mvt. Županović's version of C28 listed above was prepared from a photocopy supplied by Krešimir Filč. Probably neither the latter nor the editor were aware that it was an autograph or about the characteristics of the paper on which it was written. The editor suggests that the second theme may have been based upon a Croat folk song. For further discussion about this and other Wanhal autographs see Appendix D.

Juraj Križanić (Georgius Crisanus; Obrh/Žumberak, 1618 – Beč?, 1683), studirao u Grazu, Bologni (pravo i teologija) i Rimu (doktorirao 1642). Nakon službe u hrvatskim župama otišao je u Moskvu, Varšavu, Beč, Konstantinopol. Došavši po drugi put u Moskvu 1659. u carsku službu, bio je 1661. prognan u Tobolsk (Sibir), gdje su nastala neka od njegovih najvažnijih djela. Nakon pomilovanja 1676. otpustovao je u Vilnius, a 1683. godine pridružio se u Varšavi vojsci poljskoga kralja Jana III. Sobieskog, otišao s njom pod Beč i tamo vjerojatno poginuo za borbi protiv osmanlijske opsade grada. Čini se da se u sedam svojih djela bavi glazbom, neka od njih još nisu pronađena, neka su pak sačuvana kao rukopisi, a tiskana su samo dva: Asserta musicalia (Rim, 1656) i Novum instrumentum Ad cantus mira facilitate componendos (Rim, 1658). Idealistički panslavenski zanesenjak, ali i čovjek izvanredne kulture i enciklopedijskog znanja, Križanić je cijeloga života zamišljao pomirbu zapadne i istočnih kršćanskih crkava, te oslobođenje istočne Europe od osmanlijske okupacije pod vodstvom Rusije.

Juraj Križanić (Georgius Crisanus; Obrh/Žumberak, 1618 – Vienna?, 1683), studied in Graz, Bologna (law, theology) and Rome (PhD in 1642). After serving in some Croatian parish churches, he left for Moscow, Warsaw, Vienna and Constantinople. His second visit to Moscow in 1659 and his service to the Tzar ended in less than two years when he was banished to Tobolsk (Siberia), where he wrote some of his major works. After being pardoned in 1676, he migrated to Vilnius. In Warsaw in 1683 he joined the army of Jan III Sobiesky in his campaign to Vienna. He probably died during the battles which ended the besiege of the city by the Ottomans. It seems that in seven of his works he wrote on music, but some of them were never found, some have been preserved in manuscript copies and only two of them had been published: Asserta musicalia (Rome, 1656) and Novum instrumentum Ad cantus mira facilitate componendos (Rome, 1658). As a Pan-Slavic idealist, but also a man of extraordinary culture and encyclopaedic knowledge, Križanić throughout his lifetime imagined and hoped for reconciliation of the West to the East Christian churches, as well as the liberation of Eastern Europe from the Ottomans under the leadership of Russia.

Milan Moguš – Lovro Županović (ur.): Pavlinski zbornik 1644: I, Faksimilni pretisak; II, Transkripcije i komentari. HAZU, Zagreb 1991.

Pavlinski zbornik obuhvaća rukopise tekstova i crkvenih pjesama na latinskom i kajkavskom hrvatskom. Nastao je na području sjeverne Hrvatske, između samostana u Lepoglavi i Sv. Petru u Šumi. Sadrži i pjesmaricu, koja je najstarija poznata rukopisna zbirka jednoglasne nabožne pjesme s notama nastala u Hrvatskoj i za lokalnu uporabu. Postoje dva strosna sloja napjeva: stariji (latinski) i noviji napjevi (repertoar zabilježen u brojnim drugim pjesmaricama s njemačkog, českog i mađarskog područja), a nekoliko ih je po prvi put zabilježeno upravo u Pavlinskoj pjesmarici.

Milan Moguš – Lovro Županović (eds.): The Pauline Collection 1644: I, Facsimile reprint; II, Transcriptions and comments. Croatian Academy of Sciences and Arts, Zagreb 1991.

The Pauline Collection contains manuscript texts and church songs in Latin and in Kajkavian dialect of the Croatian language. It has been collected and written by Paulin monks in their residences between Lepoglava (Varaždin County) and Sv. Petar u Šumi (Istria). The central part of the collection is a song-book, which is the oldest manuscript collection of monodic sacral music written in Croatia and for the local use. There are two layers concerning its coming into being: some of them originate already from the Middle-Ages, the more recent ones contain the international repertory (of German, Bohemian and Hungarian provenance), and some have been notated for the first time in this song-book.

Ivan Belostenec: Gazophylacium seu latino-illyricorum onomatum aerarium. Zagreb 1740.

Hrvatski jezikoslovac i leksikograf Ivan Belostenec (Joannis Bellosztenecz; Varaždin, 1593 ili 1594 – Lepoglava, 1675) stupio je u pavlinski red 1616. Filozofiju je studirao u Beču, a bogoslovje u Rimu. Bio je prior pavlinskih samostana u Lepoglavi, Sveticama kod Ozla i Svetoj Jeleni kod Čakovca, vizitator u Istri te provincijal pavlinske provincije. Njegov enciklopedijski rječnik u dva dijela Gazophylacium seu latino-illyricorum onomatum aerarium (latinsko-hrvatski dio), odnosno Gazophylacium illyrico-latinum (hrvatsko-latinski dio) donosi oko 40 000 latinskih i 25 000 hrvatskih termina. Gazofilacij sadrži blizu tisuću glazbenih termina: mogu se pronaći 444 za glazbala i instrumentalnu glazbu te gotovo 500 termina s područja vokalne glazbe.

Ivan Belostenec: Gazophylacium seu latino-illyricorum onomatum aerarium. Zagreb 1740.

Ivan Belostenec (Joannis Bello-sztenecz; Varaždin, 1593 or 1594 – Lepoglava, 1675) was a Croatian linguist and lexicographer. In 1616 he joined the Pauline order. He studied philosophy in Vienna and theology in Rome. Belostenec was the prior of Pauline monasteries in Lepoglava, Svetice at Ozalj and Sveta Jelena at Čakovec, a visitator in Istria and Head of the Pauline Province. His encyclopedic dictionary in two parts, the Gazophylacium seu latino-illyricorum onomatum aerarium (Latin to Croatian part) and Gazophylacium illyrico-latinum (Croatian to Latin part) contains about 40 000 terms in Latin and 25 000 terms in Croatian, including almost one thousand musical terms: 444 terms denoting musical instruments and instrumental music, and almost 500 terms denoting vocal music.

Skladatelj Amando Ivančić (Amandus Ivanschiz, Amando Ivancsics, Ivanschütz, Ivantschitsch, Ivantschiz, Ivanšić, Ivančič, Ivančić; Bečko Novo Mjesto, 1727 – Graz, 1758) u pavlinski red stupio je u rodnom gradu 1743, a zaređen je 1750. Između 1751. i 1754. boravio je u Rimu kao pomoćnik generalnog prokuratora pavlinskog reda za Svetu Stolicu. Od 1755. do smrti djelovao je u samostanu Maria Trost u Grazu. Njegove skladbe čuvaju se u Slovačkoj, Češkoj, Austriji, Poljskoj, Njemačkoj, Belgiji, Švicarskoj, Mađarskoj, Sloveniji i Hrvatskoj. Cirkulacija skladbi kakvu nalazimo na Ivančićevu primjeru pokazuje međusobnu povezanost pavlina po cijeloj Europi, ali isto tako i živi dijalog među crkvenim redovima.

Composer Amando Ivan-schitz (Amandus Ivanschiz, Amando Ivancsics, Ivanschütz, Ivantschitsch, Ivanšić, Ivančić, Ivančič; Wiener Neustadt, 1727 – Graz, 1758) entered the Pauline Order in his hometown in 1743 and was ordained a priest in 1750. He spent the years 1751 to 1754 in Rome as an assistant of the Procurator General of the Order to the Holy See. From 1755 until his death he lived in Maria-Trost monastery in Graz. His compositions are kept in Slovakia, Czech Republic, Austria, Poland, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Hungary, Slovenia and Croatia. Circulation of compositions as found in Ivanschitz's case demonstrates connection of Pauline Fathers throughout the Europe, but also a lively dialogue between various Church orders.

Muzikolog Franjo Ksaver Kuhač pronašao je Ivančićevu simfoniju u Franjevačkom samostanu u Vukovaru pa je smatrao da je skladatelj tamo i živio. Kasnija istraživanja utvrdila su da je ovaj pavlinski skladatelj gradišćanskoga porijekla. (Hrvatski državni arhiv, HR HDA 805, Osobni fond Franje Kuhača LII-2-15, kutija 22.)

The musicologist Franjo Ksaver Kuhač found this symphony in the Franciscan monastery in Vukovar, so he presumed that Ivančić also lived there. Later investigation discovered that this Pauline composer was of Burgenland-Croatian descent. (Croatian State Archives, HR HDA 805, Personal archival fund of Franjo Kuhač LII-2-15, box 22.)

Drnjanska pjesmarica ubraja se među najstarije i najznačajnije pjesmarice hrvatske kajkavske književnosti. Nastajala je u razdoblju od prije 1687. do 1802. Služila je za pjevanje u župnoj crkvi u Drnju (Podravina, danas u Koprivničko-križevačkoj županiji) te za podučavanje učenika. Na str. 82 nalaze se tri nevjesta crteža koja prikazuju baruna Trenka (Tarenk=Trenk), husara sa sabljom te psa. (Facsimil. Izvornik: NSK, Zagreb, sign. R 3140.)

Songbook from Drnje (Podravina, today Koprivnica-Križevci County) is one of the oldest and the most important songbooks of Croatian Kajkavian literature. Created in the period before 1678 until 1802, it was used for singing in the Parish church in Drnje and for education in schools. Three simple drawings on p. 82 show Baron Trenck (Tarenk = Trenck), a Hussar with a sword and a dog. (Facsimile. The original is kept in the National and University Library in Zagreb, call. no. Odjeven je na turski način. Ispod slike je i duhoviti tekst o njegovim zaduženjima. (Privatno vlasništvo)

Slavonic drummer is presented within the series of graphics entitled Théâtre de la Milice Etrangère by the etcher and publisher Martin Engelbrecht (1684-1756) from Augsburg. His etchings present Austrian soldiers, as, for example, this one from the Military border, probably a member of the count Franz von der Trenck's troops, at the frontier towards the Ottoman Empire. He is dressed in the Turkish manner. Under the picture, there is a witty text describing his tasks. (Private property)

Kroatischer Korrespondent, prve sačuvane zagrebačke novine na njemačkom jeziku, objavljivao je austrijski nakladnik i tiskar Johann Thomas von Trattner (1717-1789) iz Beča. Sačuvani su samo primjerici iz 1789. godine. U broju XXXVIII od 10. 10. 1789. opisuju se svečanosti s glazbom u povodu vojnih pobjeda austrijske vojske protiv Turaka. Tom je prigodom družina direktora Göttersdorfa izvela balet na glazbu gospodina Möllera u improviziranom kazalištu u Karlovcu. (Faksimil. Skladatelj Tomaso Cecchini (Veronese, Cecchino, Zecchini, Zocchino; Soave blizu Verone?, oko 1583 – Hvar, 1644) u Dalmaciju je došao 1603. na mjesto privremenog maestro di cappella splitske katedrale. Tamo je vjerojatno ostao do 1607, a vraćio se ponovno 1613. Od 1614. djelovao je kao maestro di cappella hvarske katedrale. Njegova djela crkvenog i svjetovnog karaktera, objavljena u Veneciji, svjedoče o brzom širenju monodijiskog stila u rubne dijelove Mletačke Republike. Onodobne antologije pokazatelj su da su Cecchinijeve skladbe bile poznate u njemačkim zemljama, kao i u sjevernoj Europi.

The composer Tomaso Cecchini (Veronese, Cecchino, Zecchini, Zocchino; Soave near Verona?, c. 1583 – Hvar, 1644) came in Dalmatia in 1603 as temporary maestro di cappella of the Split Cathedral. He remained there probably until 1607, and returned for the second time in 1613. In 1614 he became maestro di cappella of the Hvar Cathedral. His works for secular or sacral purposes, published in Venice, testify for rapid expansion of monodic style in the peripheral parts of the Venetian Republic. The contemporary anthologies are an indication that Cecchini's compositions were known in German lands as well as in northern European countries.

Vanhulst je predstavio rezultate svojih istraživanja o raspodjelji italijanske muzike u Utrechtu (1639) and the distribution of Italian music in the Low Countries» Catalogus librorum musicorum, Utrecht 1639, Joannes van Doorn i rasprostranjenost njene kopije u Evropi. Osim toga, Vanhulst je predstavio i rezultate svojih istraživanja o neobjavljenoj i nerazrijeđenoj pisanju u vezi s novoprarođenim Catalogum glazbenih knjiga Nizozemca Joannesa van Doorn. Ta je knjizica sačuvana u jednom primjerku u Arhivu Muzičke akademije u Zagrebu, a u drugom u Arhivu Univerziteta u Antwerpenu (17. stoljeća). Van Doorn kao osoba dosad nije identificiran, a Vanhulst prepoštuju da je možda bio tropsav-agent ili posrednik u tugovni muzikalizaciji Između 1623. i 1634. godine.

Ljubaznoku autora, koji je uz niz utvrđenih činjenica o katalogu i njegovu sadržaju iznio i popise neidentificiranih skladatelja, u prilici smo da istaknemo prvo, da je u katalogu navedeno ime Tomasa Cecchini, a da je u tom istom dokumentu pod nerijekom enigma starje hrvatske glazbene povijesti.

Graditelj orgulja Petar Nakić (Pietro Nacchini da Sebenico, Nakić, Nanchini, Nachich, Nachich, Nanchini; Bulić kod Benkovca, 1694 – Conegliano, 1769) školovanje je započeo u franjevačkom samostanu Sv. Lovre u Šibeniku. Godine 1716. otišao je u Veneciju gdje je učio orguljarsku struku u radionici Giovannija Battiste Piaggia. U Veneciji je 1734. osnovao vlastitu orguljarsku radionicu u kojoj je sagrađeno više od 300 orgulja. Začetnik je mletačko-dalmatinske graditeljske škole orgulja, a njegov utjecaj širio se i izvan granica Mletačke Republike. U hrvatskim krajevima dolazio je u dalmatinske, primorske i istarske gradaove gdje je gradio orgulje. Na tom području nalazi se 14 Nakićevih sigurno sagrađenih orgulja: Sv. Lovreč Pazenatički, Zaostrog, Makarska, Nerežišća, Zadar (4), Split (2), Supetar, Rab, Poreč i Šibenik.

The organ builder Petar Nakić (Pietro Nacchini da Sebenico, Nakić, Nanchini, Nachich, Nachich, Nanchini; Bulić near Benkovac, 1694 – Conegliano, 1769) entered in 1713 the Franciscan Order at the Monastery of St Lawrence in Šibenik. In 1716 he moved to Venice where he studied organ building in the workshop of Giovanni Battista Piaggio. In 1743 he established his own workshop in which more than 300 organs were built. He is the founder of the Venetian-Dalmatian school of organ building and his influence spread beyond the borders of the Venetian Republic. In Croatian lands he came in towns in Dalmatia, Primorje and Istria where he built organs. There are 14 organs built by Nakić in this area: in Sv. Lovreč Pazenatički, Zaostrog, Makarska, Nerežišća, Zadar (4), Split (2), Supetar, Rab, Poreč and Šibenik.

Giorgio Baglivi and Giuseppe Michele Stratico

Liječnik i polihistor Gjuro Baglivi (Giorgio, Georgius Armenius Baglivus, Dubrovnik, 1668 – Rim, 1707) školovanje je započeo u rodnom gradu, a nastavio u Italiji. Od 1684. do 1688. studirao je medicinu u Napulju, a promoviran je najvjerojatnije u Salernu. Između 1689. i 1691. posjetio je Dubrovnik te obilazio znamenita talijanska sveučilišta i bolnice. Sredinom 1691. postao je u Bologni učenik Marcella Malpighija. Od 1692. trajno se nastanio u Rimu gdje je bio papinski liječnik te profesor anatomije na Sveučilištu Sapienza.

Portret Gjure Baglivija iz djela Opera omnia (Preslika.)

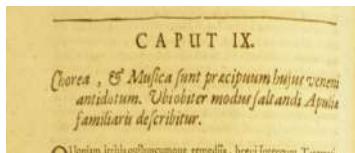

Physicist and polymath Gjuro Baglivi (Giorgio, Georgius Armenius Baglivus, Dubrovnik, 1668 – Roma, 1707) started his education in his hometown and then continued it in Italy. From 1684 to 1688 he studied medicine in Naples and was promoted probably in Salerno. Between 1689 and 1691 he visited Dubrovnik, as well as some famous Italian universities and hospitals. In 1691 he became student in Bologna of Marcello Malpighi. Since 1692 he settled down in Rome where he acted as Papal physician and professor of anatomy at the La Sapienza University.

U IX. poglavljju Dissertatio VI. de anatome, morsu et effectibus tarantulae Baglivi opisuje način plesa i glazbe kakvi su udomaćeni u talijanskoj pokrajini Apuliji, pri liječenju bolesti tarantizma. Također raspravlja o vezi glazbe, plesa i halucinantnih stanja izazvanih tom bolešću. U XIII. poglavljju istog djela Baglivi načelno raspravlja o koristima bavljenja pjevanjem, te psihosomatickim beneficijama utjecaja kretanja u glazbi na stanje duha i tijela (zubne boli, krvotok, disanje, opći fluiditet, moždana vlakna), pokušavajući teorijski i povjesno utemeljiti medicinsko-fiziološke razloge liječenja tarantizma s pomoću glazbe i plesa. I u nekim drugim svojim djelima Baglivi sporadično navodi razne aspekte odnosa glazbe, psihosomatskih stanja i medicine (npr. u Tractatus de fibra motrice et morbosa, Perugia 1700).

In the IX chapter of his Dissertatio VI. de anatome, morsu et effectibus tarantulae (Rome 1696) Baglivi described the type of dance and music, characteristic for the Italian province of Apulia, used in the process of curing the disease of tarantism. He also discussed the relation of music, dance and the hallucinating states of mind caused by that disease. In the XIII chapter of the same work, Baglivi generally discussed the benefits of dance, and the psychosomatic benefits of the movements in music upon the state of mind and body (toothaches, blood circulation, breathing, general fluidity, brain tissue), trying to find theoretically and historically the medico-physiological reasons of curing tarantism by music and dance. In some other works Baglivi also sporadically mentioned some aspects of the relation between music, psychosomatic states and medicine (for example in Tractatus de fibra motrice et morbosa, Perugia 1700).

Skladatelj, violinist i teoretičar glazbe Giuseppe Michele Stratico (Josip Mihovil Stratico; Zadar, 1728 – Sanguinetto, 1783) već je s devet godina otišao je u Padovu. Tamo je od 1737. do 1745. studirao pravo te bio učenik violine i kompozicije kod Giuseppea Tartinija. Skladao je više od 300 skladbi za gudačke instrumente sa značajkama Tartinijeva violinističko-skladateljskog kruga. Većina njegovih skladbi čuva se u knjižnici Jean Gray Hargove kalifornijskog Sveučilišta u Berkeleyju, a neke i u knjižnicama i arhivima u Padovi, Veneciji, Veroni, Modeni, Berlinu i Washingtonu. Godine 1760. preselio se u Sanguinetto (blizu Verone) gdje se bavio pravnim poslovima, ali i teorijom glazbe. Njegovi traktati ostali su sačuvani u rukopisu, a čuvaju se u Biblioteci Marciana u Veneciji.

The composer, violinist and writer on music Giuseppe Michele Stratico (Josip Mihovil Stratico; Zadar, 1728 – Sanguinetto, 1783) moved to Padua at the age of only nine. There he studied law from 1737 to 1745 and learned violin and composition with Giuseppe Tartini. He composed more than 300 compositions for strings with characteristics of Tartini's violinistic and compositional circle. The major part of them is kept in Jean Gray Hargove Music library, University of California at Berkeley, but also in the libraries and archives at Padua, Venice, Verona, Modena, Berlin and Washington. From 1760 he lived in Sanguinetto (near Verona) where he worked in law business, dealing also with music theory. His treatises are preserved in a manuscript form in the Biblioteca Marciana in Venice.

Liječnik, skladatelj, književnik, polihistor Julije (Giulio) Bajamonti (Split, 1744 –1800) prvu glazbenu naobrazbu stekao je u rodnome gradu, vjerojatno kod Talijana Benedetta Pellizzarija. U Padovi je studirao medicinu te je 1773. stekao doktorat iz filozofije i medicine. Vjerojatno je za vrijeme studija nastavio i s glazbenim školovanjem. U Veneciji i Padovi boravio je u nekoliko navrata (između 1772. i 1776), a 1772. putovao je Dalmacijom s talijanskim opatom Albertom Fortisom. U Splitu je živio do 1785, osim kratkog odlaska u Herceg Novi (1781–1782). Od 1785. do 1790. bio je liječnik u Hvaru, te orguljaš hvarske katedrale, od 1790. kapelnik splitske katedrale.

The physician, composer, writer and historian Julije (Giulio) Bajamonti (Split, 1744 –1800) received his first musical education in Split, presumably with the Italian Benedetto Pellizzari. He studied medicine in Padua where in 1773 he earned a doctorate in philosophy and medicine. During his studies he probably continued his musical education. He visited Venice and Padua several times (between 1772 and 1776) and in 1772 he travelled throughout Dalmatia with the Italian abbot Alberto Fortis. He lived in Split up to 1785, except for a brief stay in Herceg Novi (1781–1782). From 1785 to 1790 he acted as a physician and Cathedral organist in Hvar, and then as Mestro di cappella in the Split Cathedral.

Bajamonti's letter (Hvar, 1785) to the composer and diplomat Luka Sorkočević in Dubrovnik, in which he recalls their playing and studying of Gluck's Alceste. (Facsimile. Original is kept in the State archives of Dubrovnik.)

Luka Sorgo/Sorkočević (Dubrovnik, 1734 –1789), istaknuti dubrovački plemić, danas je poznat kao skladatelj prozračnih pretklasičkih simfonija. Stroga disciplina i curriculum isusovačkog kollegija koji je pohađao bio je upotpunjeno privatnom glazbenom podukom kod Talijana Giuseppea Valentija. Potom u Rimu kod Rinalda da Capue, vjerojatno u razdoblju između 1757. i 1762. Za boravka kod Josipa II. u Beču susreo se s istaknutim ličnostima pa tako i sa skladateljima Christophom Willibaldom Gluckom i Josephom Haydnom, te pjesnikom i libretistom Pietrom Metastasijem.

Luka Sorgo/Sorkočević (Dubrovnik, 1734 –1789), an outstanding nobleman from Dubrovnik, is known today as composer of dashing pre-Classical symphonies. The curriculum and strict discipline of the Jesuit College, where he was schooled, were complemented with a private music tuition held by his Italian teacher Giuseppe Valenti, and then in Rome with Rinaldo di Capua, probably between 1757 and 1762. During his stint in Vienna as the Ragusan ambassador to the imperial court he met several leading composers of his time, like Christoph Willibald Gluck and Joseph Haydn, and the famous poet and librettist Pietro Metastasio.

Sorkočevićovo pismo Juliju Bajamontiju u Hvar, kojim mu, u ime Anice Bošković, zahvaljuje na Eklogi koju je sastavio povodom smrti njezina brata Josipa Rudera Boškovića. U Dubrovniku, 26. lipnja 1787. (Faksimil. Izvornik: Državni arhiv Dubrovnik.)

Ivan Jarnović / Giovanni Giornovichi (kršten u Palermu 1747 – Petrograd, 1804) putujući je violinski virtuoz vjerojatno hrvatskoga porijekla. Obrazovan je na talijanskoj violinističkoj tradiciji (A. Lolli), počeo je javno nastupati u Parizu 1773., svirao je u aristokratskim palačama i skladao instrumentalnu glazbu prvenstveno namijenjenu vlastitoj izvedbi. Putovao je u Frankfurt i Hamburg, Berlin, Varšavu, Petrograd, Beč, i nazad u Pariz; godine 1789. odlazi u London, koncertira u Engleskoj, Škotskoj i Irskoj, kasnije u Danskoj, a život je okončao u Rusiji. Njegovih 17 violinskih koncerata tiskano je još za njegova života u Francuskoj, Njemačkoj, Austriji i Velikoj Britaniji, kao i njegovi dueti, kvarteti i varijacije na popularne teme.

Ivan Jarnović / Giovanni Giornovichi (baptized in Palermo, 1747 – St Petersburg, 1804) was an itinerant violin virtuoso of probably Croatian origins, trained on the Italian violin tradition (A. Lolli). He made his first public appearance in Paris (1773), performed in aristocratic palaces and composed instrumental music mostly for his own performances. He travelled to Frankfurt and Hamburg, Berlin, Warsaw, St Petersburg, Vienna, then back to Paris, in 1789 to London, toured throughout England, Scotland and Ireland, later to Denmark, and ended his life in Russia. His 17 violin concertos were published during his lifetime in France, Germany, Austria, and Great Britain, as well as his duets, quartets and variations on popular airs.
